Dr. Anthony Doss earned his medical degree from Meharry Medical College in Nashville, Tennessee. He completed his internship in Internal Medicine at Morristown Medical Center prior to completing residency training in Physical Medicine & Rehabilitation at Rutgers-Robert Wood Johnson/JFK Johnson Rehabilitation Institute, where he served as Chief Resident.

Dr. Doss provides patient care in the inpatient setting, including consultation services at acute care hospitals, as well as inpatient rehabilitation services with a focus on stroke and musculoskeletal rehabilitation. He takes great pleasure in individualizing a plan for each patient's unique needs and observing it come to fruition.

Dr. Doss is board certified in Physical Medicine and Rehabilitation and is involved in the education of medical students and residents. He is an active member of the American Academy of Physical Medicine & Rehabilitation and the Association of Academic Physiatrists and has presented several topics regionally and nationally.
